VOL. II. NO. 62.

CHICAGO, SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1896.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

OLD GLENOID IN RARE FORM.

Old Glenoid and little Robbie Hothersall are rapidly becoming the heroes of the Indiana tracks. Since May 23, the horse has started five times and has won on four occasions, in all of which, the clever midget rode him. In the race in which he was beaten another jockey had the mount. The boy also rode a good race on Ethel Farrell.

It was the last day at Lakeside, and to-day the scene changes to Forsyth. Friday's air was red hot, the going gratefully soft and improving. Three favorites, Miss Star, King Bors and Sullross were successful, but Ethel Farrell was a well played second choice, and old Glenoid was heartily supported. Sugar was the only outsider to score.

Ed Corrigan's green-white sash was seen at the track for the first time in the first race. Little Jimmy, who carried them, managed to land third, but Miss Star won handily and J H Grafton was an easy second.

Vanessa got a long way the best of the send-off in the two-year-old race, but was beaten. Ethel Farrell beating handily, while Mrs Murray, on whom there was a strong tip, finished third.

King Bors was the natural favorite in the first half of the mile race, and well ridden by J. Murphy, he beat Chenoa with something left.

Mobalaska opened favorite for the six and a half furlongs with Sidkel second choice. The Corrigan filly went back in the betting, while Glenoid was backed. Mobalaska and Glenoid fought the battle out, the old horse, well ridden by Hothersall, winning by a head.

Kirk was favorite in the light welter weight race. As usual he acted badly at the post. Off third, Sugar made all the running, and in a driving finish beat Kirk by a nose. Cassin did not make his effort soon enough on Revenue, or he might have won.

In the last race at a mile, Jennie June set a lively clip into the stretch, when she had had enough of it. Sullross and Outgo fought it out at the end, Freeman landing the Foster horse a winner by a length, with Longdale an indifferent third.

Tom Griffin's stable goes to Oakley and Latonia to-day. Griffin hopes to be able to get Sir Vassar ready for the Latonia Derby. In the meantime Tom goes to St. Louis to attend the Belle Meade sale.

"Major" Covington is at Lakeside. He rode Birdie C in the fifth race and was prominent for half a mile.

Forsyth opens to-day with seven races, including a hurdle race. The principal event is an owners' handicap at one and one sixteenth miles. Redskin is in with 58 pounds, and Hothersall will be up. Dejure has 65, Toots 75, Evanatus 80, Sunny and King Bors 85 each, and LaCreole 93.

GOSSIP OF THE TURF.

Perhaps the highest class stable in the Indiana colony is Tully Coulter's. Every one of its people live there, its Mongolian cook is an artist, and its people, from the owner down, well dressed, courteous and popular. Little Bob Hothersall is its pet. Coulter thinks as much of the boy as if he was his kin and with reason. The kid's a little gentleman and loves the man who cares for him so well. He doesn't weigh 60 pounds and an extra 25 pounds or so would aid him a lot. He'll get weight—the bane of all good riders—fast enough. When on Sunny—he beat Redskin for the $1,000 first money of the Decoration Handicap last Saturday Coulter's face was a study. He was as nearly angry as mankind can ever catch the happy-go-lucky New Yorker. "I'll be darned if I'll ever let that kid ride against me again," he said. There was no other objection. It was an honest, fair result to form. "Bruce" Soden rode Redskin well. But a man hardly likes to use his own to cause himself to lose $1000. Young Hothersall's hands makes him so handy on a horse

As a barber mauls or coddles the facial angle of mankind, according to manual execution, so with a jockey. The horse is sensible and sensitive. He agrees with what he likes. So do you and so do I. It's natural. Sensitive, nervous men—and women—are the world's greatest individuals, though there is a great plodding human class. This, too, is the rule of turf individuality. The race track has its well balanced creatures of high class and even temper—the Henry of Navarre's and Ben Brush's. But through its everydayism runs the intermittent talent of a Clifford, or a Libertine. So with mankind. Its Edisons do great things and steadily apply them to present needs. That's the genius of regularity—the quality the world values highest. The human flashlight—Napoleon, the real—for instance—ebbs and flows too fast for the world and is a disturber. The "real" distinction is made because the sense of reflection discards the other fellow—he of Ham, the plebscite and Sedan.

But I am drifting from hands and the horse, and their connection as to fast and winning races. This kid of Coulter's, Bobby Hothersall—he's only a mannerly kid of gentle nature and winning ways—has as grateful a hand as a moody horse ever felt. He can persuade a sour horse—prodded, whipped, yanked or sawed into sourness—to work faster than any boy in the local stables. His hold on the equine mouth is sensible and soothing, and the horse appreciates it. There's a deep lesson for every turfman in Black Bess. It's story is not a racing story, but it's equine and humane both. It's expression, delicacy, and the fitting of goods to tools in an understandable way. The tact of tongue and expression of pen, are all to us what the fine hand of the jockey is to the horse. All are pleasurable and action is faster all about, when the nature of man or horse is soothed. That's why a fine hand cuts such a deep figure in the racing of a horse of uncooth mental corners.

France has had the good sense to recognize that horse breeding is a healthy industry to be encouraged through racing and that wherever there is horse racing there is bound to be betting in some form or other. In a wise way the French Government, too, has been shrewd enough to legalize betting and share in its results. According to the official reports issued by the Government, the pari-mutuel has received 505,000,000 francs—something more than $100,000,000—in the four and a half years in which the law has been in operation. Of course, under this arrangement the French Government really becomes a partner of the bettors, but inasmuch as it has been fairly proved that horse racing is not practicable without betting, there is the practical good sense of legalism in the French arrangement.

The Eastern turf already has its law and license and before long we shall have one in Chicago.

LEATHER COVERED FORM.

The work of collecting pedigrees for the index of Leather Covered Form is so great that the book will be delayed a few days. It was necessary also to include the form of June 1 within it. Nearly the entire edition has been revised. Some thirty copies can be offered now. Subscribers will all be supplied in turn during the coming week, and just as fast as the book can be turned out of the bindery. It will be all that was promised—and more.
